

Last Year's Best Author Award Winner: Alexander Kornich

We contacted an organisation called Solar Citizens about a possible cooperation. They promised to get back to us.

PayPal complained that we were selling raffle tickets online that is against their terms and conditions. Thus we had to delete that page. Very few tickets were sold. We managed to sell some raffle tickets at the door to raise funds for renewable energy. However, not enough tickets were sold to pay for the first, second and third prize.

RMIT University Careers and Employment have posted our advertisement for volunteers on their website. We already had a good response from RMIT volunteers with many people signing up.

In this newsletter we have three articles from our volunteers in Queensland, Australia. One is called "A Positive Future for Australia", another is called "Benefits of Renewable Energy for Individuals and Communities" and last one is "Local Energy".

At the end of this newsletter we have a photo of last year's winner for Renewable Energy Society best author award, Alexander Kornich. You see the small trophy in the background near his renewable energy machine.
